In the Spotlight: Le Bonheur Community Health and Well-Being

Le Bonheur Community Health and Well-Being, a division of Le Bonheur Children's Hospital in Memphis TN, embraced the EBHV grant as a major opportunity to build community infrastructure to support services for families with young children. The EBHV grant provided a vehicle to mobilize the private and public sectors through the creation of the Early Success Coalition (ESC), a broad-based collaborative dedicated to improving the lives of families with young children. Over 70 public and private, local, State, and Federal agencies and groups have participated in the development of the ESC and are led by co-chairs from Le Bonheur and from the county mayor's Office of Early Childhood and Youth.

The ESC operates with a Steering Committee, Core Leadership Group, and nine work groups. Work groups address concerns such as: measuring outcomes, data collection, early childcare and education, infant mortality, fatherhood, funding and public policy, teen pregnancy prevention and support, public awareness, and coordinating outreach and referral. The Early Success Providers Network (ESPN) has organized primary providers of home visitation and clinic based services for pregnant women, mothers and their children and developed a "no wrong door" outreach and referral process to best match services to a family's needs. The ESPN is educating community partners about issues including housing, education, mental health providers, and welfare, to enable them to connect families to the ESPN primary services.

FPO Corner: A Federal Update

Dear Grantees,

We hope that this edition of the newsletter finds you all doing well and hopefully seeing the first signs of spring! It has been a pleasure to speak with many of you during our check-in calls over the last few months. These calls have allowed us to get a more in-depth look at the current status of your program, and have served as another reminder of the exciting and important work that you all continue to do on a daily basis. Based on the information that you have shared with us during these calls, we know that the remainder of this year will be very busy as you continue to move forward by expanding or strengthening your service provision, adding new staff members, building new community

In the Spotlight: Le Bonheur

Le Bonheur is implementing NFP as the home visitation model in the EBHV grant. Rapid enrollment has resulted in hiring two more nurses and increasing program capacity from 100 to 150. Through the EBHV grant, Le Bonheur's NFP has been enhanced through the addition of a mental health component. A psychologist acts as a consultant to the NFP nurses and provides guidance, support, and education on mental health issues that clients are experiencing. Visit us at www.earlysuccesscoalition.com.

partnerships, or carrying out your planned evaluation activities. The OCAN staff have been busy as well working in collaboration with the HRSA and ACF staff to support the implementation of the new Maternal, Infant, and Early Childhood Home Visiting Program. We will continue to keep you updated on our efforts in this area and look forward to hearing how you are partnering with the MIECHV Lead Agencies in your States.

In addition to the activities that you all have planned for the coming months, we would also like to share with you some information about exciting upcoming events that may be of interest to you and your staff. One such event is National Children's Mental Health Awareness Day, which will take place on May 3rd. This national event is organized by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA), and seeks to raise awareness about the importance of children's mental health, and that positive mental health is essential to a child's healthy development from birth. Communities around the country will participate by holding their own Awareness Day events, focusing either on the national theme, or adapting the theme to the populations they serve. For additional information about this event, and to learn about how your community can get involved, please visit <http://www.samhsa.gov/children/>.

As you all are aware, April is National Child Abuse Prevention Month. This annual event provides numerous opportunities to raise public awareness of child abuse and neglect, and to promote community involvement through State and local activities. To learn more about this event, including ways to engage your community and promote awareness of child abuse and neglect issues, a calendar of related activities, and information on additional ways to get involved, visit <http://www.childwelfare.gov/preventing/preventionmonth/>.

Lastly, you should also be aware that this year's annual grantees meeting will take place June 20-22 in Alexandria, Virginia in conjunction with the Preventing Child Maltreatment and Promoting Well-Being: Network for Action Meeting. Please see the "Save the Dates" section of this newsletter on Page 7 for additional information about these exciting events.

If you have questions or would like additional information about any of these events, please feel free to contact your FPO. We look forward to seeing many of you soon, and to working with all of you throughout the remainder of this exciting and busy year!

Family Focus:

Celebrating the Successes of EBHV Clients

This new section of the EBHV Connector aims to highlight the successes of families served throughout EBHV programs. One success story will be shared in each upcoming edition of the newsletter. If you would like to submit a success story of a family that has been served by your EBHV program, please contact Lauren Kass at Lauren.kass@acf.hhs.gov. This month's success story comes to us from Child and Family Tennessee's Project Babies program.

Pregnancy can be a difficult time in a woman's life, especially as a young immigrant with little or no resources and no family support system on-hand.

This is reality for "Annie," who moved to Knoxville in August of 2010 following an arranged marriage in India to a university graduate student. Annie and her husband are expecting in March. Because her husband is in the U.S. on a student visa, he is unable to work to provide for Annie and their unborn child. The couple was referred to Child & Family Tennessee's Nurse Family Partnership program, Project Babies, by the Knox County Health Department.

When Annie lived in India, she was part of a higher social class and had many friends and family members to support her. Now that she lives in Knoxville, facing poverty and isolation, Annie looks forward to the interaction she shares with Nurse Angeline. At first, Annie and her husband were unwilling to open up about their struggles with moving to the United States. The couple was also very fearful to ask for help or to ask the wrong questions.

It was their belief that either of those things could impact the status of their immigration.

In January 2011, the couple faced an additional challenge when paying student fees to the university depleted their funds, making it impossible to pay their rent. Annie was unaware of their financial situation until the last minute when her husband reluctantly shared it with her. She immediately contacted Nurse Angeline who has become Annie's go-to person. Angeline is working with the couple to assure them that asking for help is not shameful and will not negatively impact their visa status. Annie and Angeline went together to visit multiple agencies and church groups that partner with Project Babies. Annie was empowered to gather enough money to pay their rent.

Nurse Angeline continues to empower Annie to speak up, ask questions, and seek the resources she needs. Annie and her husband are now involved with a local pregnancy resource center that offers classes as well as supplies for expectant families. Additionally, Angeline located free individual and couples counseling with a local Indian therapist. She is working with the couple to overcome many of the cultural unknowns they are experiencing.

Annie has gained confidence, is interested in becoming involved with the community, and wants to eventually pursue the additional education she needs to continue her work as a Physical Therapist. Nurse Angeline counts it as a huge success that, after helping the couple pay their rent, Annie's husband sent her a heartfelt message of thanks.

Annie and her husband have a long road ahead; however, with the support of Child & Family Tennessee's Project Babies program, their Nurse Home Visitor Angeline, and the community, their path will be bright and paved with success.

FRIENDS National Resource Center Focus: Tribal Maternal, Infant, and Early Childhood Home Visiting Program Grantee Kickoff Meeting and Tribal Early Learning Communities Consortium

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' Administration for Children and Families (ACF), in collaboration with the Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA), has awarded 13 grants for the Tribal Maternal, Infant, and Early Childhood Home Visiting Program. The goal of this home visiting program is to address the diverse needs of at-risk American Indian and Alaska Native children and families.

On January 18-19, 2011 the Administration for Children and Families sponsored the Tribal Maternal, Infant, and Early Childhood Home Visiting Program Grantee Kickoff Meeting, which brought together the program's 13 grantees and other Tribal partners. The goals of the meeting were to: 1) clarify the vision and goals of the Tribal Home Visiting Program, 2) provide an opportunity to meet and learn from one another, and 3) provide grantees with a variety of tools and resources to conduct Year 1 activities and to prepare their Implementation Plan.

The FRIENDS National Resource Center managed the logistics for the meeting, and FRIENDS staff and partners presented in several of the sessions. The 169 registrants had many stimulating sessions to choose from, including sessions on needs assessments, continuous quality improvement, data management, organizational readiness, recruitment and retention of families, and selecting benchmark indicators and tools. Two Sharing Your Story sessions offered grantees an opportunity to meet and learn from each other, begin to build relationships, and find opportunities for peer learning. A working lunch provided the participants with the opportunity to hear from, and meet with, several home visiting model developers with experience in working with Tribal populations.

The Grantee Kickoff Meeting was followed by a Tribal Early Learning Communities Consortium on January 20, 2011. This event engaged several Tribal Home Visiting, Child Care, and Head Start Grantees in a discussion of the "Early Learning Communities" concept, and how this concept has been and could be applied in Tribal communities and Native populations. The FRIENDS National Resource Center facilitated a Community Café model to support conversations among tribal members. The Cafés used questions designed to solicit input on goals, needed stakeholders, and next steps for these Early Learning Communities. A graphic recording was created that conveys the highlights from this day. A section of this 20-foot graphic recording can be seen in the photo below.

Cross-site Evaluation News

Mathematica Policy Research and Chapin Hall

Maintaining Fidelity: Lessons Learned from Grantee Experience

Maintaining fidelity to a program's design is critical both for achieving effective outcomes and for taking programs to scale. As discussed during a recent EBHV-sponsored webinar, local agencies implementing national home visiting programs face a number of challenges in ensuring that services are replicated in a manner consistent with model expectations. Presentations by representatives from the Mathematica-Chapin Hall cross-site evaluation team and two of the 17 Supporting Evidence-Based Home Visiting to Prevent Child Maltreatment initiative grantees offered similar advice on how to structure program implementation and evaluation to enhance model fidelity and quality.

The webinar provided an overview of the Mathematica-Chapin Hall cross-site system for documenting the fidelity of home visiting programs being implemented by the 17 grantees, including guidelines for determining a program's initial fidelity and compliance with model standards and indicators for assessing ongoing fidelity at the staff, participant, and service delivery level. In addition, representatives from DePelchin Children's Center in Houston, Texas and St. Vincent Mercy Medical Center in Toledo, Ohio discussed the strategies they have employed in their replication of the Triple P (DePelchin) and Healthy Families America (St. Vincent) models.

Although approaching the issue from different perspectives and contextual realities, all three presentations underscored three essential strategies for strengthening the fidelity of program replication efforts. These strategies include:

- In-depth training for all home visitors and supervisors prior to implementation about the structural and dynamic aspects of the model, which addresses both the content and manner in which services are provided. In many cases, this training involves the direct observation of home visitors interacting with families to ensure quality of the participant-provider interaction and full familiarity with key practice principles.
- Ongoing supervision of home visitors to ensure that key practice principles are evident in a provider's interaction with all of her program participants. Key supervisory strategies include direct or taped observations, one-on-one supervisory sessions, and team meetings to review common challenges and potential service enhancements.
- Consistent documentation by home visitors and supervisors of all direct service activities, including the content covered during the home visits and the nature of the interaction between the home visitor and the participant. Such documentation is fully integrated into the service delivery process and reflects the importance that a program places on the consistent use of key practice principles.

Replicating evidence-based programs is challenging even when such models are highly specified. The use of these three strategies provides implementing agencies with important tools to ensure consistent adherence to model standards as well as provide early indications of when implementation efforts fall short. The identification of such difficulties offers program planners the opportunity to adjust their implementation approach or, in some cases, create necessary and timely adaptations to the model to fit local participant needs and community context.

About EBHV

In 2008, The Children's Bureau within the Administration for Children and Families at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services funded 17 cooperative agreements to support the infrastructure needed for the widespread adoption, implementation and sustaining of evidence-based home visitation programs. Grantees are leveraging their grant funds with other funding sources to support the implementation of EBHV programs with fidelity, the scaling up of these high-fidelity home visiting models, and the sustainability of the models. Grantees are also conducting local implementation and outcome evaluations, along with economic evaluations. The program's overarching goal is to generate knowledge about the use of evidence-based home visiting programs to prevent child maltreatment, including obstacles and opportunities for their wider implementation. For additional information, please visit the EBHV website at <http://www.supportingebhv.org>.
